LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30, 1865.

THE SPEECH OF EX GOV. CURRY, OF OREGON, at Boston, has created a great deal of interest in business circles in these parts, from its detailed description of the capacity and resources of the North-West. [This speech has already appeared in our columns.—ED.]

EX-GOVERNOR FULLER, OF UTAH,

delivered a very lengthy address at the same meeting from which I make a few extracts. At the close of the first session of the last Congress, the President of the United States appended his signature to a bill "granting lands to aid in the construction of a railroad and a telegraph line from Lake Superior to Puget Sound, on the Pacific coast, by the northern route." The lands thus donated amount to nearly fifty millions of acres. Alluding to the basin of the Columbia as the largest and most important of the basins of North America, he said: Here many great rivers, besides the Snake and Columbia, descend from the great arc of the snowy mountains, where it circles towards the Northwest from 43 degrees to 52 degrees, and, flowing towards the west, concentrate into a single trunk, which here severs the mighty cordillera, and empties itself at once into the open Pacific. It is here, passing from Lake Superior along the high ridge of the table lands of Dacotah, up the fertile banks of the Yellowstone, or the Upper Missouri in Montana, following the bed of a fork of the Columbia in Idaho, and pursuing the course of that gigantic river to the terminus, and sending a branch northward along that beautiful valley to Puget Sound—it is here, I say, that the great natural highway of the American Continent is found, and here will be the pathway of the future generations of the New World, as the people of the Old World pass down the Mediterranean and out by Gibraltar.

This, then, is the route, the natural route, because fashioned by nature—the double-inclined plane, up the banks of the navigable waters which empty into the Atlantic, and down the shores of the majestic river which disgorges its contents into the Pacific. No other equal outlet is found from the Isthmus to Behring's Straits.

The Columbia is larger than the Danube, and equal to the Ganges. In size, climate, agricultural excellence, capacity for population, and the remarkable circle which it describes, it infinitely surpasses both the Colorado and the Del Norte, the only two other bodies of water which have forced themselves through the great mountain ranges. The mouth of the Columbia, a salient point upon the open coast, convenient and central more than any other to the whole North Pacific and Asia, is in size, depth of water, safety and facility of ingress or egress, equal to the Bay of San Francisco. As the mouth of the greatest river descending from our continent into the Pacific, it is infinitely before it. It is eight degrees south of Liverpool, and has the climate of Bordeaux, Marseilles or Savannah. The shallowest channel of the Columbia has thirty-five (35) feet of water; the deepest of New York, twenty-nine.

The necessity of a general railway system between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans to take the place of the present totally inadequate means of communication is so universally admitted that no word is required to demonstrate it. The overland stage service is so slow and difficult as to be virtually useless. The steam communication by way of the Isthmus is not equal to the positive requirements of the comparatively sparse population of the west and of the Pacific, and as it is partly over foreign territory, is liable at any time to be interrupted by war. The practicability of communication by steam across the continent, and particularly by the Northern route, has been fully discussed in Congress and elsewhere, and abundantly proved by the various explorations and surveys that have been made.

Mr. Fuller alluded to the trade of Canada, having, as he said, reason to believe that British capital is destined to assist largely in this enterprise, giving statistics of the productions of Canada in 1860, and of the trade under the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada in 1862. The latter is as follows:

Imports from Canada to United States	$18,041,120
Exports from United States to Canada	25,173,157
Total value of imports in Canada	43,800,493
" " of " exports	31,070,045

He also gave statistics of the population and productions of Minnesota, whose rapid development is unequalled in this country, and followed with the annexed description of the northwestern States and territories:

MONTANA.

The new Territory of Montana, on the Eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, embraces an extensive and fertile tract of land on the headwaters of the Missouri and Yellow Stone rivers. The gold mines, of which the first were discovered in 1862, are exceedingly rich, so rich that the original miners, with their rude appliances, could collect from $10 to $100 worth a day, and frequently as high as six hundred dollars were washed out with a single rocker. The quartz lodes in the surrounding regions have proved to be of surpassing extent and value. This Territory contains 83,000,000 acres. At the beginning of the present year the population of Montana was estimated at 30,000. The year previous the population was estimated at 12,000. Many streams flow from the mountains, the land is arable, and the valleys of the Mississippi and Yellow Stone are especially rich. The Yellow Stone is navigable for several hundred miles. There is fine grazing in all parts of the Territory, water is abundant, and there is much fine timber.

IDAHO.

The people of Idaho have great confidence in the future of the Territory. Only those who have seen it can realize the extent of its mineral resources and the value of them. Its area is 100,000 square miles, and its population 25,000. The capital is Boise City, a flourishing town situated in the rich valley land of the Boise river. Its gold and silver mines are believed to equal any in the world. The gold yield of the year ending June 30th, 1861, was $2,206,306—an increase of more than two million dollars in a year. In the month of July last, one express company transported $500,000 from Idaho to San Francisco.

OREGON.

The new State of Oregon, a considerable portion of it lying in the valley of the Columbia, and on the ocean, will, with Washington, share in the benefits to be conferred by this road and will contribute to its success. Oregon is primarily and principally a farming region. Its soil is most productive, and its improved farms and excellent farming will constitute the State a vast garden. From a peculiarity of climate and soil, there has never been a failure of crops in Oregon. One of its great valleys, the Willamette, is one of the most prosperous sections of the Pacific. There is evidence on every hand of improvement. Not only are the towns becoming more populous and the country homes more cultured, but everywhere the people are becoming more self-dependent. Factories are springing up; mills are building; roads and rivers are improved, so that the transit of freight and passengers is made speedy and convenient. The success of Oregon has been gradual and healthy.

There are extensive mineral districts in the Blue Mountains of East Oregon, and ledges of rich ore have been discovered there. These have already invited enterprise and capital. The exports of the treasure in 1861, were $7,000,000.

Inexhaustible iron mines have also been discovered in Oregon, and they extend into Idaho. There are likewise large deposits of coal. On account of the great cost of freight and machinery, the development of these resources is comparatively slow, but with the construction of the Northern Pacific road, the necessary impetus would be given, and there is every reason to believe that the future prosperity of the State would be greater than the past has been. The taxable property in Oregon in 1864 was rated at $75,000,000. The population, which has been increasing very fast of late, is now 75,000.

WASHINGTON.

Washington Territory, the western terminus of the Northern Pacific route, has as many natural advantages in all respects as Minnesota, the eastern terminus. Bordering on the Pacific Ocean and on the Columbia river, it is extremely well situated for commerce. Washington has probably the best harbors on the Pacific coast. There are principally in the Straits of Juan de Fuca, Admiralty Inlet and Puget Sound. The anchorages are excellent, and free from all dangers. These waters comprise one of the finest estuaries in the world.

The lands of Washington are both agricultural and mineral. The extent of the territory is 28,000,000 acres, and the fertility of most of the soil is such that it would easily afford supplies for a million of people. There is also a vast amount of lumber, and the lumber trade of the territory is already heavy. Ships are constantly freighted with timber for the ports of California, Central and South America, China, Japan, and the islands of the Pacific.

Much coal exists in the Puget Sound district. It is not so fine as the Pennsylvania coal, though it is of a good quality. The deposits are declared to be inexhaustible. There is undoubtedly coal enough here, and in Idaho, Oregon, &c., to supply the many millions which will soon populate the Pacific coast, for all time.

The inland waters of Washington, particularly those of which the straits of Juan de Fuca form the outlet, and which cover a space of two thousand miles, abound in fish. The supplies are reported on competent authority to be nearly equal to those of the New England fisheries.

Emigration to Washington has increased rapidly, and it is fair to infer that the early proposed departure of several hundred women from New England for that Territory will prove an additional stimulus.

The climate and soil of Washington are adapted to the raising of all crops that grow best in temperate zones.

THE COLUMBIA RIVER.

The Columbia river, which will be the chief tributary of the Northern Pacific Railroad—it was formerly the Oregon river—has an average width of three quarters of a mile, and is well adapted to navigation. Clear, blue, glassy, dotted with little islands, it is the Hudson of the Pacific slope, the most beautiful of all the great rivers of the Pacific coast.

ASIA.

Consider the relations of this road with Asia. The comparative nearness of the American, and Asiatic coasts in the latitude of Puget Sound, at once suggests the superiority of the Northern route. A trip from Victoria or Olympia to Japan will be much shorter than a voyage from San Francisco to China. This consideration, greatly enlarged with our knowledge of the resolute determination of Russia as rapidly as possible to increase her commercial facilities on her Pacific coasts both in Asia and America.

TRADE OF ASIA.

The trade of Asia will be secured to us by opening communication across the continent. The silk, and teas of China, the spices and other products of India, the commerce of Japan and Australia, and the treasures of California, and of the territories of the West and Northwest, would together find a direct route to the Atlantic coast and to Europe. The seven hundred million people of Asia and the islands of the Pacific would be reawakened to the importance of their commerce. The trade of China alone is estimated at one hundred and fifty million dollars annually. Her imports into the United States in the year ending 30th June, 1862, were valued at $11,351,713; the exports from the United States to China were $4,917,427. The extent of the business depending on the completion of the new route is very great; it is believed the amount of it would be not less than five hundred millions. The diminished distances averaging five thousand miles and the quicker communication—would naturally give to America an immense advantage over Europe.

San Francisco is not the natural depot or entrepot for the commerce of our continent and Asia. Nature has here intervened, also, in favor of the Northern route. A vessel under sail, going westward from San Francisco, must sail northward to the vicinity of the Straits of Fuca, near Puget Sound, in order to catch the northeast "trade winds," which shall bear her to her Asiatic port. Coming out of the China seas she must keep northward to avail herself of the "brave west winds." This fact alone has established quite an extensive commerce for the various harbors on Puget Sound, which now trade direct with Asia.

RESOURCES OF THE PACIFIC COAST.

The resources of the great States and Territories of the Pacific coast, almost unlimited as they are admitted to be, will not be developed in this century. During the financial year just closed (June 30th,) the receipts of bullion at San Francisco were $53,601,303, surpassing those of any previous year except one. This increase over last year is due mainly to the large amount sent from Nevada, Idaho, Oregon and Washington. It is a curious and interesting fact that the Pacific coast furnishes about one-half the whole amount of money received by the Central Treasury of the Sanitary Commission, according to an official report just published. The contributions of the Eastern States were mostly in supplies.

The necessity for the construction of the Northern road must be evident from a glance at the map, showing how large a part of the continent is dependent upon such a road for development. The history of all new American railways shows that the region penetrated very soon creates heavier demands for transportation than the road can supply. The traffic of the great lakes, lying in the same latitude, and the rapid growth of the States and Territories through which it is to pass, would seem to indicate the imminent need of such a road.

As to its practicability, I am thoroughly convinced, after having traversed a portion of the route, over which it must pass, and from the observations which I have been able to make of other projected routes—observations made during two journeys across the entire breadth of the continent, constant explorations during series of years, up and down the plateau of the Table Lands, including eight several journeys across the Western Andes, and considerable travel along the coast range of the Pacific—that the route selected is the most feasible for cheapness of construction, of any now known. Certain it is that it has not an equal in this respect south of the 45th deg., and if a more favorable northern route exists it is as yet unexplored.

The Central Pacific Road will be built. Obstacles flee when boldly they're confronted. It has the liberal pecuniary aid of the Government. It has at its head brain and energy. Its managers are equal to the task, "though Alps on Alps arise" to interpose a barrier to the Western Sea.

But the North Pacific road has these and more. Nature has carved out a pathway, and the nations shall walk thereon. Colonel Rowland, the Commissioner of the road, is pursuing the work of presenting this great scheme to the notice of the sections of country which its completion is destined to so essentially benefit, with great vigor and energy. The President of the most important railroad line in England, and of the longest line in America, is to-day presenting this same subject on 'Change in London.

Compare the relative distances to be traversed by the NORTHERN AND CENTRAL ROUTES.

Colonel Rowland gives the following comparison of distances on that route and on the Central:

Actual running distance by proposed Central Route		2,032 miles.
Add from Chicago to Council Bluffs	400	2,432
Actual running distance by proposed Northern route	1,864
And difference between the parallels of St. Paul and Fond du Lac	40
Actual difference in favor of the Northern Route		528 miles.
Aggregate ascents and descents of Central Route		29,120 feet.
Aggregate ascents and descents of Northern Route		17,604 "
Altitude at summit above the sea—Central		8,373 "
do do do do—Northern		6,044 "
Length of level route of equal working expense—Central		2,553 miles.
Length of level route of equal working expense—Northern		2,198 miles
In favor of Northern Route		355 "
Add for excess of distance from eastern termination, against Chicago		390 "
Making an actual economic difference in favor of Northern route of		745 "

The difference in altitude at the crossing of the mountains of 2329 feet is equivalent to six degrees of latitude in favor of the Northern route.

It is evident that the farther north a railroad can be built, so that the extremely cool weather will not interfere with its operation, the better the business of the line, especially in light goods and passenger traffic. The reason of this is, that the sea courses are shortened by thus taking a northerly course, and short sea courses are the desideratum in all lines of modern travel. The rate of speed at sea must always be slower than on land, while sea-sickness, that great dread of the traveler, is to a great extent avoided. Short sea courses, with large steam vessels, and long land lines, with large locomotives and broad tracks, should be secured in the new route to the East Indies and China, across the Continent, and the northern line possesses these advantages, in a high degree over all others.

YOUR TREASURY SHIPMENTS.

Late telegraphic dispatches from San Francisco published in the morning papers here, announcing the arrival in the latter port, of various steamers from your port, giving the amount of specie per such, at from $300,000 to $500,000 creates quite a favorable impression of your northern mining region in the monied circle of this metropolis, and people really begin to know that there are such places as Oregon, Idaho, Montana etc.

THE GIRLS NOT YET STARTED.

From late copies of the "OREGONIAN" I learn that your citizens with their accustomed liberality have already made preparations in the way of money collections, and holding fairs for the purpose of properly providing for the expected arrival on your shores, of the four or five hundred young and lovely "Yankee girls." I have seen Mr. Mercer the projector of the enterprise, and learned from him that his efforts with the Government authorities to procure transportation for his precious freight have been unsuccessful, and hence the delay in his departure. But he assured me that he has made positive arrangements with the Ben Holliday Company, and will sail with his party about the 20th instant, in the Company's steamer Continental, via Cape Horn, calling at Rio Janeiro and Valparaiso. So you see the "boys" will have to wait at least another three months.

TRIAL OF JEFF. DAVIS.—It will be noticed that a resolution has been offered in the House asking the President why Jeff. Davis is not brought to trial. The reason as well as [illegible] why Jeff. should be hung, may be found in the following article from the Boston Journal of Nov. 18th:

In the political progress of the last dozen years we have observed this general fact, that the body of the people and the more advanced [illegible] were in substantial accord, and gradually drew over to them the Government and the [illegible] of public men. We do not [illegible] ble exception to this rule. Our adversaries [illegible] man on the Union [illegible] nated "the radical leaders"—are [illegible] have [illegible] Davis go free, or, at least, see him [illegible] to his punishment, even in case he undergoes a trial for treason. The reason for this feeling probably differs somewhat with different individuals, but our purpose now is to [illegible] draw attention to this fact.

On the other hand, we have not the least doubt that the vast majority of the loyal [illegible] of New England are in favor of not only trying Jeff. Davis for the crime of [illegible], as soon as that can be conveniently done, but [illegible] they [illegible] if not as promptly, as Mrs. [illegible] and her guilty [illegible]. The people would regard such a [illegible] of that bloody [illegible] to hand [illegible] tional hope of [illegible] and they are at a loss to comprehend the [illegible] of [illegible] in his favor which has sprung up among [illegible] of our leading men.

Such is this [illegible] between those who have been in substantial accord hitherto, which must have [illegible] upon many [illegible]. How will it be reconciled? Which [illegible] ultimately prevail with the [illegible] and the Government? [illegible] new [illegible] by [illegible] alleged [illegible] of [illegible] a trial of the arch rebel, and the [illegible] that the whole matter may be [illegible]. For our own part, we [illegible] as far at least as to [illegible] that Jeff. Davis be [illegible] to solemn trial for the crime of [illegible], which President Johnson has said [illegible] to be [illegible] ed and made [illegible].

If that is not [illegible], what is the use of trying any slaves against [illegible] in the [illegible] of the United States for [illegible], in all the [illegible] and centuries that may be [illegible] there [illegible] of treason than that now [illegible] of Jeff. Davis. Every [illegible] of the [illegible] is combined in his [illegible] the [illegible] with awful [illegible] the [illegible] Davis led, [illegible] from [illegible] to him, thus [illegible] one of our [illegible] and [illegible]. To our mind, [illegible] ment. If Davis is to be [illegible] at all, let it at least be as a tried and convicted [illegible], [illegible] the brand of [illegible] judgment upon him. Nothing less than that, we [illegible] the people of this country.

It will also be noticed that an act has been introduced in Congress to meet the [illegible] and difficulties in obtaining a jury in Jeff. Davis' case. If this becomes a law, Jeff. can be tried anywhere, and the jury cannot disagree.

THE SCENE OF LEE'S SURRENDER.—The Richmond Enquirer says:

A gentleman just from Appomattox Court House informs us that there is nothing left of the apple tree under which General Lee surrendered, but a rod hole in the ground, and it is feared that, unless the hole is fenced in, that also will be removed by curiosity seekers. It is a subject worthy of notice, too, that the apple tree alluded to was the largest tree in the world, being at least forty times the bulk of the celebrated California oak, which was about the size of the citadel of Ham. About 917 cords of this apple tree have already been distributed over the United States in the shape of walking canes, fishing poles, [illegible] handles, policemen's clubs, work boxes, sewing machines, writing desks, vest buttons, corks, charms, lead pencils, pen handles, toddy muddlers, toothpicks, tobacco, pipes and snuff boxes. The number of [illegible] is estimated at about 28,000,000, which is equivalent to the number of rebels killed, wounded and missing in the late war, according to the published statements of Northern newspapers, from statistics gathered at the time. In fact this tree enjoys as wide a circulation as any Yankee medicine in existence, and, but for the fact that Gen. Lee didn't surrender under any apple tree at all, it might be appropriately placed, photographically, among the historic archives of the country, as the greatest tree in all history.

The Quartz Ledges of Idaho—Yuba District.

The discovery of quartz ledges of unusual richness in Owyhee, and also in several parts of Montana Territory has withdrawn attention to some extent, from other valuable fields The South Boise region is already one of the best districts known Some of the ledges of that vicinity will compare favorably with any that can be found elsewhere. The lodes are very numerous, and most of them are easily worked The rock generally yields well Nearly all the ledges are wider than those of Owyhee, and if the yield per ton is not so large in the former as in the latter place, the aggregate amount of the precious metals which will be mined in South Boise bids fair to almost equal, and perhaps it may eventually exceed that obtained at Owyhee.

A new ledge has been discovered in Yuba District, South Boise, which will quite rival the celebrated "Poorman" of the Owyhee country The Yuba ledge is named the "Greenback," and was discovered about the first of November last by a gentleman named De Frees, formerly of California, and Nevada. The ledge has a width of fully seven feet, and the rock is of uniform value "The rock of the richest quartz leads is generally found to be of unequal richness; but in the "Greenback" the precious metals—chiefly silver—are dispersed equally through the whole ledge. We have seen specimens of the rock It contains much more silver than any other we have ever seen, except some of the best specimens from the "Poorman." The ledge has been traced for a long distance. Next spring or summer, a mill will be set at work upon it. Near the discovery there is an excellent and extensive water power which will be made use of in crushing the rock This water power is supplied from large hot springs, and hence will be available in winter as well as in summer

VERY FUNNY.—A few days ago we received an [illegible] dispatch [illegible] of a letter from Gov Orr, of South Carolina, to Secretary Seward The telegraph made the opening of the letter run in this wise:

"The following [illegible] was received from Governor Orr.

"The [illegible] County Debating Club" out in Indiana, are debating the question, "Which is the pre[illegible], a girl with her first beau, or a woman with her first baby?"

We did not print this remarkable piece of intelligence concerning the Debating Club aforesaid, but [illegible] that portion of the dispatch giving what [illegible] to us to be the whole of the Governor's letter. We were not [illegible], however, to [illegible] the [illegible] of the Polly[illegible] Club [illegible] into the [illegible] The San Francisco Flag, from which [illegible] report was [illegible] which, by the way, now has better [illegible] than any other California [illegible] circumstance. The item about the Club [illegible] mentioned was picked up by the printer in the Flag office and [illegible] mixed with the overland news. So, after all, Governor Orr was not the author of the dispatch concerning the highly important proceedings of the [illegible] County, Indiana, [illegible] Club."

"[illegible]—Every [illegible] of the Review, for [illegible] has much to say on the subject of "[illegible]." "Has no [illegible]," "[illegible] more [illegible]," &c., are favorite [illegible] of that paper [illegible] of its [illegible]. All the [illegible] that (as it [illegible]) the other journals are lacking in, the Review, with a delightful modesty, [illegible] to belong to itself. While we are not going to [illegible] that the Review has been unapproachable in [illegible] since the day when, the [illegible] which had been diffused [illegible] by [illegible] into the [illegible] of [illegible] we cannot help thinking [illegible], with a slight alteration, would [illegible] apply:

[illegible] lover of self,
[illegible] the price it is worth
[illegible] that which it puts on it!

SHIPWRECK.—On Saturday, the 23d ult., the ship William Tell, of Bath, was lost in the Straits of Fuca. Early in the morning of that day she struck on a reef of rocks about three [illegible] west of Port San Juan. A heavy gale was [illegible] at the time. The shore was about 100 fathoms [illegible] from the place where the ship struck. The water about the reef was very deep By [illegible], the crew carried a line to the shore and by this means all on board were saved The ship was soon broken up by the [illegible] sea. Nothing whatever was saved from the vessel She was a new ship of 1,400 tons and was worth about $40,000. At the time of the disaster she was in ballast, and had orders for spars for the French Government.

BOAT UPSET—LOSS OF LIFE.—The Victoria papers record a frightful calamity as having recently occurred near Race Rocks' lighthouse. Three persons, a Mr. and Mrs Warner, with a man named Linton, started from Victoria on Christmas morning in a Whitehall boat for the light house at Race Rocks. At Esquimalt the party took two other [illegible] Saunders and Simmons on board On nearing the rocks, the boat was caught in the counter currents formed by the tide, and upset, drowning the whole party.

PERSONAL.—Mr. George Wallace, of the Cariboo (British Columbia) [illegible], visited our office yesterday. He comes by way of Victoria He gives favorable accounts of the mines of British Columbia, and thinks the recent discoveries at Big Bend are of [illegible] and importance. Mr. Wallace is accompanied hither by Mr. Bell, of Victoria.

CORRECTION.—The following sentence occurs in our article of yesterday, on the new election law "The oath here referred to is much more comprehensive and far more binding than the one prescribed in the new law" The word more in the above sentence in both instances, was originally written less.

A CERTAINTY.—The Review asks "Who can tell what another year will bring forth?" There is one thing that we are positively assured of [illegible]—the defeat of the "Democracy." Of that event there is as much certainty as there is of anything which has transpired "in the backward and abysm of time."

VICTORIA ITEMS.—From our Victoria files we glean the following:

The Bank of British Columbia received by the Enterprise on Thursday evening, from New Westminster Assay office a beautiful bar of gold valued at nearly $7 000, and melted from Big Bend dust, which is pronounced to be 911 fine, about 40 finer than Cariboo gold

The vessel seen bottom up off Cape Flattery was the bark Oakland a new vessel on her second voyage All hands were lost A heavy deck load of lumber caused the disaster

The Hudson Bay Company have tendered for the construction of a steamer on the Shuswap Lakes. Should they obtain the contract they will at once put up a sawmill on the lakes.

The roof of the James Bay saw mill and the roof of a house on Cormorant street, gave way yesterday beneath the great weight of snow

The notorious Yelverton case is not yet disposed of Mrs Yelverton has given notice of her intention to move for a new trial in her case against the Saturday Review

The Dublin Evening Post says The report that Stevens had arrived in Paris is stated to be fully confirmed It is further stated that his extradition has been demanded by the British Government on the grounds of prison breaking to which demand the French Government replied by referring the British minister to the crime for which Stevens was originally committed, contending that the minor offence of prison breaking is merged in the high political crime imputed to him and refused consequently to surrender the refugee A correspondent of Saunder's News Letter thinks there are strong grounds for believing that Stevens is still on British soil

NEW YORK, Dec 29—The special commission appointed to try the Fenians has adjourned its sittings from Dublin to Cork The New York Herald's letter from the latter city mentions the departure of a number of skillful pilots from Ireland for the United States; and this is considered as strong evidence of contemplated operations by the Fenians on the coast of England

Mr. Smith passed a pork shop the other day—Mr. Smith whistled The moment he did this, every sausage "wagged its tail" As a note to this we would mention that the day before he lost a Newfoundland dog that weighed sixty-eight pounds

[illegible] A newly arrived [illegible] lately took up a quarter section of land in one of the unsurveyed townships of Washington Territory. After spending an unprofitable season at work on his place, he became sorely disgusted and began to look for other means to the best market [illegible] He was told that the laws of this country would not permit him to leave the land, but he must stay there [illegible] years [illegible] he would be able to obtain a title and sell his improvements. He was found in great tribulation at the prospect, resented to him by his [illegible] neighbor who volunteered this bit of [illegible] advice regarding the [illegible] of America, and in [illegible] he made a visit to this office for the purpose of consulting a lawyer upon the matter. He here represented [illegible] and said he would not [illegible] the chances for his remaining on the plantation, he would sooner commit suicide or desert the country. [illegible] his dullness of comprehension was opened and when the true facts were made known to him that Uncle Sam never used compulsion to settlers on his domain, he left the city in not twenty-four hours [illegible] legal information, and returned at once to pick up his traps and put his late mighty efforts to rear a family in contentment where there was no hope of amassing earthly treasures within [illegible] reasonable length of time.

U. S. Circuit Court. Deady, J. Wednesday, Jan 3d. [illegible] vs. Frazer & Crawford.—On the demurrer of Frazer [illegible] held that it had jurisdiction of this action. It [illegible] against officers of the revenue [illegible] of acts [illegible] in that capacity, but that Frazer was not [illegible] an action for money unlawfully collected by Crawford [illegible] Demurrers sustained. [illegible] The city fathers are preparing to [illegible] upon the system of pretty gallism now in [illegible] the dead-falls of this city. These girls are nuisances on account of their adventures in relieving [illegible] loads of surplus change, and the Council have come to the conclusion that they can well afford to [illegible] taxes. A tax sufficient to close up such places [illegible] should be levied. That saloons will exist [illegible] men will patronize them is certain, and the matter [illegible] being allowed ought to be so arranged that [illegible] who keep saloons and are identified with the [illegible] should receive the benefit of them. These common [illegible] are generally run by persons who have no other object in view than making money, and are here to-day and [illegible] to-morrow.

[illegible] at East Portland.—The committee of ladies, [illegible], Mrs. Allen, Mrs. White, and Mrs. Hurd [illegible] had the supervision of collecting and dispensing [illegible] to the youth of East Portland, wish to return [illegible] to those who generously responded to their calls [illegible] contributions to that object. The occasion was one [illegible] to inspire the hearts and render happy those [illegible] participants. The baskets filled to overflowing [illegible] fully received at the festival, and many a child [illegible] glad. This year the interests of Portland and [illegible] have been more closely allied during the [illegible] season, and may we not express the hope that [illegible] the close of the year they will be in many things [illegible]

[illegible] Guards' Ball.—The annual ball of company [illegible], Capt. Hills, will take place on the evening of 22d [illegible], Washington's birth day, at the Lincoln [illegible]. The fact having been established heretofore that [illegible] Washington Guards know exactly how to tender a [illegible] party, and that Gen. Coffin understands how [illegible] for a large attendance, no more need be said [illegible] subject to warrant all who wish to attend in having [illegible] of enjoyment, than to mention the circumstance. We hope, for the benefit of the company, who [illegible] deserving of considerable credit, that our people [illegible] out liberally on this occasion.

[illegible] morning the steamer John H. Couch, Capt. [illegible] left the O. S. N. Company's dock in this city for [illegible] Rooster Rock was gained, but further [illegible] was impossible on account of the wind which [illegible] in an undefinable manner. The Couch dropped an[illegible] attempted to work on up the river, but the [illegible] was too severe and after dragging her anchor for [illegible] mile, was obliged to haul it up and put back. [illegible] found floating in the channel, that appeared to [illegible] up as if it had come over the Cascades. The [illegible] Couch will be dispatched this morning, we un[illegible].

[illegible] —A private letter from one of the most [illegible] San Francisco firms was shown us yesterday, [illegible] it was stated that Mr. Patton, owner of the new [illegible] Montana, intends placing that vessel on the [illegible] route within two weeks. The writer was hopeful [illegible] Montana would disturb the old tubs now plying [illegible] trade considerably, as she is a new and elegant [illegible] and will be the means of giving us a safer, quicker [illegible] per class of vessels than heretofore. The letter [illegible] on the 24th and was based upon a conversation [illegible] day previous. We certainly hope such an event [illegible]

[illegible] Nevada.—The place on which the steamer [illegible] Nevada was grounded, is but a short distance [illegible] the mouth of Willamette Slough. Passing up the [illegible] was quite foggy, and a miscalculation was made by [illegible], Mr. Jolliss, when the steamer was run on [illegible] distance out of the channel. The freight has all [illegible] taken out, and to-day the barge Ellen will receive [illegible], when there will be another effort made to get [illegible] off.

[illegible] Cannery.—The Astoria Gazette learns by [illegible] from Capt. Brooks that he will not continue in [illegible] Oregon and Idaho trade any longer, but will leave it [illegible] those who are rather jealous of his good prospects in [illegible] line. He has lost several thousand dollars in [illegible] and is perfectly willing to retire with the consolation that he was the pioneer in a trade that others may [illegible] profitable.

Important Notice.—In compliance with recent orders [illegible] Postoffice Department, Wells, Fargo & Co. announce [illegible] morning, that hereafter all letters must be enclosed [illegible] the various denominations of government stamped envelopes, according to weight, as no postage stamps will [illegible] received on hereto letters.

The Ferry Landing.—Portland can now boast of a [illegible] ferry landing. Tragedy at Yreka, California.

Yreka, Jan. 4.—John Wifenbach, an old and wealthy citizen of this county, living about one mile from town, committed suicide this morning by blowing the top of his head off with a shot gun loaded with revolver balls. His wife was found in bed dead, having been shot through the head with a revolver. Wifenbach sent one of his children to a neighbor's in the morning with a book in which he had written that his wife had killed herself. The child stated that its mother was dead, and father had gone in the room to get the shotgun to kill himself. It appears that three shots had been fired from the pistol at the wife, only one of which had taken effect, the others passing through the side of the house above her. The evidence before the coroner's jury went to establish the fact that the man had killed his wife and then blew his own brains out. Wifenbach was partially insane.

GOVERNOR MAGRATH BEGS TO BE RELEASED —The following letter is from ex United States Judge and ex Governor Magrath of South Carolina, now confined as a prisoner in Fort Pulaski and is a piteous appeal for release:

FORT PULASKI November 8 1865

My Dear —— It costs me an effort to seat myself and write you because the subject of my letter is always a matter of great consequence to me and at the same time of great trouble to my friends who are able to do anything for me And the thought that the sight of my handwriting brings annoyance to my friends is itself a source of inexpressible pain Still my dear [illegible] so torturing to me that instigated by the letters which my fellow prisoners have received to day I am forced to write you and ask if it is not possible to accomplish my liberation? Every other Judge of the United States who resigned is at large Why should I be detained? What have I done? Who strove in the State more earnestly than I did for years to avert separation? Who was held more responsible than I for having stayed the action of the State? And when I did resign what other course could I pursue than that which I did pursue in resigning at once that a successor might be appointed? Would this be condemned? If so, where was the alternative? Was it to continue, and either thwart the action of the Government or renounce opinions which I honestly entertained? If this be true what is my offense but in having such opinions? And can that be censurable when with me the conclusion was not a matter of choice, but of necessity the cause of the conviction I had? I could go further for you know that because of an adherence to the like convictions I became obnoxious to the Government at Richmond. The opinion I had of that Government had excluded me from its confidence and deprived me of its favor Certainly in the entertainment of my opinions and in the adoption of my conclusions, I have shown that I was endeavoring to seek the truth, and in the search I maintained consistency

If Judge —— is opposed to me it can only be from some private pique To Seward I am wholly unknown, and what can Judge —— have against me? Can I not point to my course during the time that I held the commission of the United States and ask him, or any one else, to say in what is there wrong?

Am I not entitled to claim that I met the Court of the United States in South Carolina, an effete institution, little known or respected and that under my auspices and direction it had risen to as great consequence and enjoyed as much respect and confidence as any other Court in the State? Was it not known to all that in the increase of its business the road was opened for the lawyer of South Carolina to the Supreme Court, where but few before had ever found their way and that the unhappy convulsion which shook the country alone prevented that more extended intercourse from which so much good was expected? Or will it be said that I closed the Court and stopped the action of the Government? Could I close the Court, except so far as I was the Judge, by my resignation? Could not a successor have been appointed? Could not Judge —— have opened the Court? Could not all business have been [illegible], the law transferred to the Courts of Georgia?

No matter what my private opinions may have been, you know that opposition to the movement in the State was utterly idle. You know that the only organized party in the State by which opposition [illegible] had been [illegible] was broken up, and that the leading members in different parts of the State had dissolved its unity. You know that in the Summer of 1860 Boyce published his letter, in which he urged separate State action in the event of Lincoln's election, although he had been one of the leaders of the anti [illegible] party in 1850 You know that soon after Orr published his letter in which he [illegible] as soon as four States were ready to act. You know that these and other facts [illegible] the same to be but one purpose everywhere, and all felt that upon the [illegible] of the contingency which was then contemplated the choice [illegible] be made by all [illegible] they would [illegible] What [illegible] all this [illegible] Who knew more of the [illegible] than you? And [illegible] when [illegible] any of the [illegible] I have filled [illegible]?

My application [illegible] is full and faithful [illegible] not only of [illegible] but also of opinion [illegible] assurance of future obedience to the Government is given in the strongest terms. My willingness to aid in carrying out the policy of the Government and sustaining the harmonious union of the States [illegible]

Can I not, [illegible] circumstances, have that relief which my [illegible] would afford? If the President is so disposed, let the pardon depend upon my conduct in the future. Is this asking too much? Can it be obtained? I would not trouble you [illegible] if I knew any other to whom I could write and who would be able to act in the [illegible]

Yours, very truly,
A. G. MAGRATH
